Teaching and Leadership

September 2018 – Current: University of Jordan

Assistant to the Dean in Student Affairs

Hosting events with politicians, public figures, and academics. Solving academic problems and mediating between students and teachers. Running student elections.

September 2017 – Current: University of Jordan

Full-Time Lecturer

Responsible for up to five modules per semester, taught in both Arabic and English for home and international students. Teaching mainly strategy (African, EU, Asian Studies) and Political Philosophy (Arab/Islamic, Contemporary). General Requirements Officer: editing and writing political chapters for textbook used across the university; writing corresponding exams and advising colleagues on corresponding teaching methodologies for the subject. Leader in electronic teaching via Moodle, particularly in International Studies Faculty.

September 2016 – January 2017: Hashemite University

Lecturer: Lecturer of Contemporary Middle Eastern Politics and the International Relations of the Arab Nation

Prepared and taught two modules; wrote, administered, and marked 11 exams for these modules and supervised one other exam; evaluated the progress for both classes and advised students on further study options. Supported the renewal and ratification of the Department of International Relations and Strategic Studies at the Hashemite University, which included introducing new teaching and learning methodologies, such as European essay-style exams, and emphasis on analysis and the development of critical thinking to equip students for further study or vocation.

September – December 2014: University of East Anglia

Associate Tutor: Clash of the Fundamentalists

Teaching theory of Islamic fundamentalism to a class of final year undergraduates for one semester. Rare reading materials I suggested were later incorporated into the course.

2014 – 2015: University of East Anglia

Supporting academic, theoretical, and essay development for doctoral, masters, and undergraduate students, as appointed by supervisors.

Research Leadership and Further Experience

2018 – 2021

Academic Coordinator, EUMENIA Network (Jean Monnet)

Awarded a Jean Monnet grant of 300,000 EUR to establish the EUMENIA Research Centre on EU-Middle East relations as well as organize relevant thematic research and teaching activities for the first time in Jordan.

2010 – 2015

Ph.D. Researcher: For my research I spent six months in Jordan collecting data, arranging and performing interviews with leaders of the Muslim Brotherhood, and translating and transcribing these interviews. I also analysed my data and developed a transliteration system making my research the first UK thesis to implement transliterated Arabic fully.

2010 (3 months)

Visiting Scholar: Centre of Strategic Studies, Jordan

Team leader of 8 international interns due to lack of communications between English-speaking interns and the CSS centre. Supervising, liaising, translating, and coordinating duties, trips, and data collection. I led the fieldwork of the project between Fulbright and the CSS, regarding visiting the refugee camps and assessing the resources and services of UNRWA along with working on my project regarding how the Muslim Brotherhood functioned within the camps.

2007 - 2008

Internship: Jordanian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Jordan

Placed in three departments, including Media, International Organisation, and Arab League Organisation, I interned for a full semester during my BA, using my findings in my final dissertation. The work included analysing media in order to provide the Head of Department with a political forecasting report.
